Rainbow Apocalypse

An installation by Macha Suzuki

This was printed on the occasion of the exhibition, Rainbow Apocalypse, September 5-March 10, 2018 Wignall Museum of Contemporary Art, Chaffey College 5885 Haven Avenue, Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91737 www.chaffey.edu/wignall Macha Suzuki first came up with the phrase "Rainbow Apocalypse" in 2012 for an exhibition of his work at the Laguna Art Museum. The dates for the exhibition spanned the proclaimed "end-of-the-world" date of the Mayan calendar. The thought that the end date of the exhibition was after the end of the world amused Suzuki, so it became the working title of the exhibition and subsequent projects.

For Suzuki, the rainbow signifies peace and hope in his artwork because the end will bring forth a new beginning. Suzuki notes that in the Christian bible, the rainbow is a symbol of God's promise not to bring another flood to wipe out the world. It is a symbol of peace from God to the people.

Myth tells us that a pot of gold waits at the end of the rainbow, however in this story the text and title suggest that there is an apocalypse, or THE END. Suzuki uses visual whit to suggest a story that is simultaneously bleak and optimistic, depending on how you look at it. An alternative interpretation is that there is a rainbow at the end of the apocalypse and hard times can open to a colorful future. Perhaps there is a purpose or meaning to it all and there is something to look forward to after the end. It is all a matter of perspective and faith.

Suzuki references the rainbow as a symbol of peace and hope, but the rainbow is also a symbol that celebrates differences and diversity, confidence and pride. For any student here at Chaffey, I hope that the experience developing and expanding their lives brings optimism with the knowledge that new beginnings start with the end of something before. In this process of new beginnings, it helps to recognize who we were, who we are, and who we are becoming. It is also worth considering that there is no definitive end. After all, a rainbow is actually a circle.

MACHA SUZUKI

I tell stories, real life stories about my experiences: what I have done, what I have seen, and what I have heard. I do not necessarily convey these experiences factually. Instead, I dress them up with elaborate fabrications some would call lies. I pull these stories from my memories, taking them out of their original context and recreating them to allude to other larger narratives. In my stories, things are extremely exaggerated to provoke feelings and emotions such as wonder, nostalgia, defeat, and joy. I hope these stories captivate and amuse viewers and make them want to come back for even better sequels.

QUESTIONS FOR VIEWING

Suzuki uses stenciling to create repetition in his work. Consider how this repetition functions in this installation, both visually and conceptually.

How does the size and scale of this artwork influence its meaning and effect?

A temporary mural by Pável Acevedo is also on view in the CAA building. Consider the similarities and differences between the artworks and artists. In particular, consider the materials, technique, and installation.

ESSAY PROMPTS

Research and write an essay exploring the symbolism of rainbows across different cultures and historic times.

Suzuki uses stencils and spray paint in this work. Research contemporary artists that use stenciling, spray paint, and/or text in their work. Write an essay comparing the work of Suzuki to the artists from your research.

Research the science behind color and light. Is the color of light (rainbows) different from the color of objects (spray paint)? How is a painting of a rainbow similar and different from an actual rainbow?

Consider your own beliefs and faith. Write an essay discussing this artwork and its subject matter. Discuss your personal belief, but also research philosophical or theological texts to support your thoughts.

ACTIVITIES

Using red, yellow, and blue (or cyan, magenta, and yellow) create a gradated rainbow (or color wheel) using acrylic paint with a brush, and another using spray paint. Write a brief summary of the exercise and compare the different results between the two.
