

Film, Television, and Electronic Media

DUAL ENROLLMENT ACADEMIC AND CAREER PATHWAYS

Introduction to the Major and Career Field

Students will learn the three main phases of the movie making process: preproduction, production and postproduction, including critical analysis, film theory, social and cultural influences, historical contributions by women, African Americans, Asians, Latinx, Native Americans and other American national cultures including issues of inclusion and diversity that impact film, television and electronic media productions. Preproduction examines the story idea, writing a synopsis, plot structure, screenwriting, storyboarding, and applying other industry scripting formats. Production covers the operation of high-definition video cameras, tripods, digital audio recorders, microphones, cabling, grip and portable lighting equipment used in producing a scripted production. Postproduction entails the use of a Mac computer and corresponding standard industry video editing software to assemble, edit and formulate a coherent viewing experience. The theory of montage editing, and three interrelated areas of emotion, performance and story are fully explored in the edit decision-making process.
