Would you like to get feedback from a faculty peer on a specific aspect of your teaching or student interactions through a non-evaluative process? Join the FOCUS (Faculty Observing Colleagues United for Success) program and discover new insights into your teaching, your students, and your classroom environment. Allowing a colleague of your choice to observe a specific lesson, activity, interaction, or class with a focus on a specific issue that you determine allows you to gather ideas and insights difficult to get any other way. This workshop will describe this new program and provide a framework for using it effectively.
