CREATING A CULTURE OF RECOGNITION

Research reveals that some of the core motivational needs for students to be successful include having a sense of belonging, a recognition of their effort, strengths, and achievements, and having their instructors demonstrate that they care about their success. Students who have a strong sense of belonging and recognition are more likely to persist, show resilience, and stay engaged in learning. Join us for this interactive seminar as we explore tangible ways to create a culture of recognition and belonging for students in the instructional environment. Participants will learn and experience numerous approaches, strategies, and activities throughout the two days of the seminar.
