The Young Artists Series exhibition and silent auction is a celebration of the collaboration between the Wignall Museum of Contemporary Art and Chaffey College’s Child Development Center. During fall 2010 and spring semester 2011, children and staff at the Chaffey College Child Development Center will work together with volunteer artists to create unusual, unexpected and inspired works of art using different techniques, including painting, sculpture, printmaking and more. The Young Artists Series exhibition and silent auction creates a showcase for talent, exploration and creativity.

All works of art that are sold benefit the Child Development Center and the Wignall Museum of Contemporary Art in support of future arts and literacy programming for children and families. The Child Development Center provides subsidized child care services to student parents at Chaffey College, directly supporting the education of our students and allowing them the ability to focus on their studies while knowing their children are receiving support, education and nurturing. The Wignall Museum of Contemporary Art is dedicated to presenting innovative exhibitions and programs that reflect the scope and diversity of the art of our time. A vital component of the academic and cultural life of the Chaffey Community College District, the Wignall Museum aspires to engage broad and diverse audiences, create a sense of community, and provide a place for contemplation, stimulation, and discussion of contemporary art and the questions that shape and inspire us as individuals, cultures and communities.

View the exhibition and works for sale March 15-17, 10am-4pm. A silent auction will be launched at noon on March 18 through 5pm. Cash, check and credit card accepted. Live entertainment and light refreshments will be served.
