MARC MEYER

Full-Time Faculty
Anthropology
Social & Behavioral
Sciences

Dr. Meyer coauthored a new article "The multi-period settlement "Dali" in southeastern Kazakhstan: Bronze Age institutional dynamics along the Inner Asian Mountain Corridor" published in the journal Asian Perspectives. This research was a collaboration with scholars from the Max Planck Institute, Washington University, St. Louis, Colorado State University, and Nazarbayev University. The research was conducted by Dr. Meyer during his fieldwork in Kazakhstan with the Dzhungar Mountains Archaeology Project, an international field project engaged in archaeological excavation, survey, mapping, and materials analysis. This research combined new discoveries of skeletal, architectural, and material cultural remains to further our understanding of Kazakhstan's early nomadic and sedentary populations from 5000 years ago onward.
