Regular & Substantive Interaction (RSI)

Local Definition for Distance Education

Effective Term	Scope	Authority
Spring 2027	All fully online (asynchronous and synchronous) and hybrid courses	Academic Senate / District Administration

I. Purpose & Regulatory Basis

This document establishes Chaffey College's local definition of Regular and Substantive Interaction (RSI) for distance education courses. It is intended to align institutional practice with federal and California state requirements, support equitable and high-quality instruction, and provide clear, consistent expectations for faculty, evaluators, and administrators.

- Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. §600.2) define distance education as instruction delivered through technology that "support[s] regular and substantive interaction between the students and the instructor."
- California's Title 5 regulations (§55204) additionally require that any portion of a course conducted through distance education include regular and substantive interaction between instructor(s) and students, and among students if described in the Course Outline of Record (COR) or distance education (DE) addendum.

Why This Matters

RSI is the regulatory boundary between "distance education" (Title IV eligible) and "correspondence education" (not eligible). Failure to meet RSI requirements can jeopardize federal financial aid eligibility for students.

ACCJC accreditation reviewers evaluate RSI during institutional reviews. Consistent, documented evidence is essential.

Strong RSI practices are associated with better student outcomes, retention, and equity, particularly for online learners.

II. Substantive Interaction

A. Substantive Interaction: Methods and Examples

To satisfy the substantive interaction requirement, instructors must use at least two of the following federally recognized methods. Examples below are illustrative, not exhaustive. See Section III-B for cadence requirements.

1. Direct Instruction (Scheduled Synchronous Online Sessions Only)

- Live lectures, real-time demonstrations, or synchronous class sessions with active instructor facilitation via video conferencing or other approved educational technology

> ⚠ This method does not apply to fully asynchronous courses per the ACCJC Quality Continuum Rubric (Nov. 2024).

2. Assessing or Providing Feedback on Coursework

- Rubric comments, SpeedGrader annotations, or submission comments that explain performance and offer specific improvement suggestions
- Audio or video feedback on student assignments
- Feedback on drafts, outlines, or formative work with actionable guidance

> ⚠ Feedback must be substantive. Comments limited to “good job” or grade notation without explanation do not qualify.

3. Providing Information or Responding to Questions About Course Content

- Instructor-created written instruction, videos, screencasts, or audio recordings in response to student questions about content or course progress
- Instructor-created guides, examples, demos, or annotated models in response to student questions about content or course progress
- Instructor-created academic announcements that address common errors, connect course content to current events, or highlight key insights

Note: Course content built before the term (e.g., pre-recorded lectures, readings, publisher materials) is instruction but is not, by itself, substantive interaction.

4. Facilitating Group Discussion

- Posing discussion prompts designed to deepen analysis, then engaging with student responses through follow-up questions or synthesis

- Instructor participation in collaborative assignments or peer review with oversight and guidance
- Use of Canvas discussion tools or third-party learning tools (e.g., LTIs such as Harmonize, Perusall, Pronto, Padlet) with active instructor facilitation

> ⚠ Posting a discussion prompt alone does not constitute facilitation. The instructor must actively participate to guide learning.

B. Substantive vs. Other Interaction

Not all instructor contact constitutes "substantive" interaction. The following distinctions apply:

✓ Substantive Interaction (counts toward RSI)	✗ Other Interactions (do not count as Substantive)
Meaningful rubric feedback on an assignment	Grade posting without feedback comments
Announcing upcoming content and connecting it to course objectives	Automated "assignment due" reminders
Responding to a content question with academic guidance	Deadline or syllabus logistics announcements only
Facilitating discussion with follow-up prompts	Replies of "Good job!" or "Great work!" without elaboration
Instructor-created video or recorded content tied to course objectives and created in response to student work or discussions	Posting required readings/videos without instructor-initiated engagement
Proactive outreach with academic guidance to a struggling student	Facilitated discussions that do not directly address course content (e.g., personal or academic advising)
Live lectures, review sessions or real-time demonstrations in scheduled synchronous class sessions	An optional/unstructured discussion board with no facilitation

Who provides the interaction. Substantive interaction must come from the instructor of record, who meets the minimum qualifications for the discipline. Publisher courseware, auto-graded quizzes, adaptive learning tools, and AI-generated responses or feedback do not count toward RSI on their own, although they may support learning and academic engagement. Interaction provided by tutors, supplemental instruction leaders, or other support staff does not substitute for instructor interaction.

III. Regular Interaction

A. "Regular" Defined

Regular means predictable, scheduled, and consistent throughout the entire term, not front-loaded, back-loaded, or clustered around high-stakes assessments only. Regular interaction is:

- Built into the course schedule and communicated to students in the syllabus or orientation
- Distributed across the full term without extended gaps that leave students without instructor contact
- Commensurate with the pace and intensity of the term length (accelerated terms require more frequent interaction)

B. Cadence Requirements: Minimum Frequency by Term Length

The following table defines the minimum instructor-initiated RSI rhythm for asynchronous, synchronous online, and hybrid courses. Section IV explains how it applies to synchronous and hybrid courses. These are floors, not ceilings; more frequent interaction is encouraged and supports student success.

Term Length	Min. Instances of Substantive Interaction	Number of Substantive Methods
17.5-week or 14-week	1× per week	At least 2 different substantive interaction methods over the course of the term
8-week or 6-week	2× per week	At least 2 different substantive interaction methods over the course of the term

C. Monitoring Academic Engagement and Success

Federal regulations (34 C.F.R. §600.2) require the College to ensure that student academic engagement and success are monitored and that an instructor will "promptly and proactively" initiate substantive interaction when needed. At Chaffey College, the instructor of record carries out this monitoring. Monitoring is an RSI requirement, not an optional best practice.

Minimum Monitoring Expectations

- Check student participation and progress (assignment completion, discussion participation, academic activity in Canvas, assessment performance) on a regular basis throughout the term (at minimum weekly or per module, consistent with the cadence standard in Section III-B) and at least once prior to the withdrawal deadline.

- Initiate proactive, substantive outreach when students are not participating or showing signs of academic difficulty.

Effective Outreach

Outreach to inactive or struggling students must be substantive and action oriented. An effective outreach message includes:

- What the student missed or where they are falling behind
- How to re-engage with course materials and activities
- Where to find help (tutoring, counseling, instructor office hours)
- Any time-sensitive deadlines or consequences

> ⚠ A brief "just checking in" message without academic guidance does not satisfy the substantive outreach requirement.

IV. Application to Synchronous Online and Hybrid Courses

Sections II and III apply to all distance education courses. This section explains how they apply when some or all of a course meets in real time or in person.

A. Synchronous Online Courses

Synchronous online courses (fully online courses delivered through live, real-time video conferencing such as Zoom, held on a regular schedule) differ from fully asynchronous courses in that scheduled live class sessions themselves constitute Direct Instruction under Section II-A.1, provided the instructor actively facilitates the session.

- Regularly scheduled synchronous sessions satisfy the "predictable, scheduled, and consistent" standard in Section III-A for the class meetings they cover.
- The cadence minimums in Section III-B still apply to synchronous online courses: at least two different substantive interaction methods are required over the course of the term, and Direct Instruction (live sessions) may count as one of the two.
- Prerecorded lectures, without live instructor facilitation at the time of the session, do not qualify as Direct Instruction.

B. Hybrid Courses

A hybrid course replaces part of its scheduled in-person instruction with distance education. Title 5 (§55204) requires regular and substantive interaction in any portion of a course conducted through distance education. In-person instruction is not distance education, so the online portion of every hybrid course must meet the requirements in this document on its own.

- In-person class meetings do not count toward the minimum frequency in Section III-B or as one of the two substantive interaction methods. In each week that includes online instruction, the online portion must include at least the minimum frequency in Section III-B.
- The online portion must show at least two different substantive interaction methods over the course of the term, drawn from Section II-A.2–4. Section II-A.1 also applies if the online portion includes synchronous online sessions.
- In-person meetings may introduce, preview, or follow up on online work. The course schedule should show students when each portion takes place.
- Monitoring under Section III-C applies to hybrid courses throughout the term, including engagement in the online portion.

V. Student-to-Student Interaction

California Title 5 (§55204) requires student-to-student interaction in distance education courses if specified in the COR or DE addendum. This is a state requirement, separate from the federal RSI framework. Faculty are required to provide opportunities for student-to-student interaction per Chaffey College's DE addendum included in the COR. Faculty are evaluated on whether they design and provide structured opportunities for student-to-student interaction, not on whether individual students choose to participate. Student-to-student interaction can, but is not required to, meet the definition of substantive interaction.

Examples of What Qualifies

- Peer review or critique with clear criteria and instructor oversight
- Collaborative group tasks or projects aligned to course competencies
- Discussion boards, chats, or Q&A with instructor facilitation (not optional or unmonitored boards)
- Social annotation or peer-response activities
- Other activities that provide the opportunity for students to interact with each other

> Faculty Action Item
> Consult your COR and DE addendum to confirm the specific type and frequency of student-to-student interaction required in your course.

VI. RSI Evidence for Accreditation

Federal regulations and accreditation standards require regular and substantive interaction (RSI) that is predictable and scheduled, along with monitoring of students' academic engagement and success (34 C.F.R. §600.2; ACCJC 2024 Accreditation Standard 2.6; ACCJC Policy on Distance Education and on Correspondence Education). ACCJC peer reviewers verify RSI by examining archived course sections in Canvas; the college is responsible for providing access to any evidence that lives elsewhere (Protocol for Distance Education Review, Nov. 2024). Programs and faculty should ensure that RSI is not only occurring, but that it is transparent, documented, and verifiable for purposes of accreditation review and institutional compliance.

Evidence Category	Examples in Canvas / Course Materials
Regular Interaction	Syllabus, orientation materials, or communication plan includes response time expectations, grading turnaround, and contact methods. A visible schedule of instructor-initiated interaction (e.g., weekly overviews, module intros/wrap-ups). A pattern of RSI distributed across the term.
Regular Interaction: Monitoring & Outreach	Messages to inactive or struggling students (e.g., emails, individual comments on submissions, Canvas Inbox).
Substantive Interaction: Direct Instruction	Syllabus showing that the section meets synchronously on a regular schedule, with live sessions posted in Canvas (e.g., calendar events or Zoom links). Applies only to synchronous online sessions (Section II-A.1; see also Section IV).
Substantive Interaction: Feedback on Coursework	Rubric comments, SpeedGrader annotations, or submission comments with substantive guidance. Audio or video feedback on student work. Feedback that explains grades and offers specific improvement suggestions (not just "good job").
Substantive Interaction: Responding to Course Content Questions	Instructor responses to course content questions via Canvas tools or Q&A discussion boards. Announcements that address common errors, connect content to current events, or highlight insights. Instructor-created video or recorded content tied to course objectives and created in response to student work or discussions.
Substantive Interaction: Facilitating Group Discussion	Instructor prompts designed to deepen analysis. Follow-up questions, synthesis posts, or guided critique in student discussions. Evidence of active instructor participation, not just grade recording.
Student-to-Student Interaction	Discussions with instructor facilitation (not optional or unmonitored boards). Peer review or critique assignments with criteria and instructor oversight. Collaborative group activities.

VII. Expectations per the 2026–29 Chaffey College Faculty Association Agreement, Section 19.8

- The faculty member publishes, by 8:00 a.m. on the first day of class, and maintains a course shell in the District learning management system for all assigned classes that includes an electronic copy of the syllabus, an up-to-date gradebook, and information about how office hours (if applicable) will be conducted and times of availability.
- The faculty member communicates, within the first week, with students who are absent or have not logged in on the first day of class and urges them to log in and participate.
- The faculty member provides regular and substantive interaction between the instructor and the student (e.g., discussion boards, chat, feedback on assignments, course announcements, email).
- The faculty member provides opportunities for student-to-student interaction (e.g., discussion boards, group projects, presentations).
- The faculty member maintains regular instructional engagement and monitoring throughout the course.

7. Report(s)

7.1. President

- Attended the first-ever American Filipino History Event, including other staff, and faculty, and managers who are Filipino. The event offered traditional food and activities.
- This morning, the President attended Chaffey College's first-ever Filipino American History Month event. Rose Ann Osmanian participated on the panel alongside other Filipino faculty, staff, and managers. We enjoyed Filipino food and heard some really meaningful stories.
- I've also attended two IEPI/PRT sessions. The Institutional Effectiveness Partnership Initiative's Partner Resource Team brings together faculty, managers, and staff from community colleges across California to assess institutional practices and identify opportunities for improvement. Our college received support through IEPI to develop a business plan for emergency procedures and operational continuity.The team conducted focus groups with various campus groups, including our leadership team and shared governance representatives, to discuss what's working well and what could be improved. They presented their findings Monday morning in the MAC, along with a menu of recommendations for developing and implementing our emergency preparedness and operational plan. Overall, I've really appreciated this process. It's an opportunity to document and evaluate our practices intentionally, rather than simply going through the motions, and to think critically about how we institutionalize and improve our work.

- Attended CCSG representing OERI. The student voted to pass the Low Cost Textbook threshold at $30.

7.2. Vice President - No report.

7.3. Secretary/Treasurer

7.4. Curriculum Chair - TOP Code Clean-Up Update: For those who reviewed the curriculum agenda, you may have noticed the TOP and ZIP code clean-up items being initiated on behalf of faculty. These updates do not require the traditional review process; they are part of a broader clean-up effort that will be completed by December.

7.5. Classified Senate Liaison - No Report

7.6. Chaffey College Student Government Liaison- No REport

7.7. Academic Senate Workgroups, Reporting Committees, and Liaisons

- On October 17th, Chaffey College successfully hosted the California Community College Foreign Language Conference.We invited colleagues from all over community colleges across California. They are very proud and honored to host this conference. Dean Jason was there in the audience in support of this event, and I want to say thank you for Spanish department including Tamari, Rachel, and Vicki,who planned and support this event. However, in this conference, we encountered a big problem. The visitors were unable to connect to the Wi-Fi. Imagine someone visits your house and asks, can I have your Wi-Fi? Sorry, not for the guest. Imagine you are having a conference and you want to add a last-minute change research on your presentation.You cannot get on the Wi-Fi. So, I'm respectfully requesting, the Faculty Senate explore the option for providing temporary guest Wi-Fi access for visiting faculty, conference participants, and other academic guests at future campus events.
- Tamari Jenkins shared that the Faculty Success collaborated. AI book discussion meeting tomorrow from 12-1. reading The Opposite of Cheating. Community and Practice for what community minders do. Friday 1:30-2:30 in person. Race Consciousness Vs. Race Subvasiveness. A little trouble with attendance, but actual professional learning content had to be cancelled due to low enrollment.
- CCSG this last Sunday Trunk or Treat event. Thank you to CCSG for handling that.
