Chaffey College is one of a select group of community colleges chosen to participate in an initiative sponsored by California LAW. This unique opportunity for Chaffey students provides a potential pathway from community college to and, ultimately, to eight California law schools and their undergraduate schools. Chaffey Pre Law students who complete all California LAW requirements are designated as Cal-LAW Scholars. This entitles them to benefits provided by the pathway program. Participating law schools: Loyola Law School, Los Angeles, Santa Clara University, University of California, Berkeley, University of California, Davis, University of California, Irvine, UCLA, University of San Francisco and University of Southern California. Participation in this program does not guarantee admission to any participating university or law school.

All students must (1) earn an Associate’s degree and satisfy all major requirements, (2) complete the seven courses in Chaffey’s Pathway to Law School certificate, (3) earn an Associate’s degree from Chaffey College or another participating community college, and (4) transfer to a university to complete their undergraduate studies. Students are also strongly advised to participate in an approved public interest/civic service activity. Interested students should contact a Chaffey College counselor or a member of the Chaffey College Legal Studies faculty for more information.
